1 PREAMBLE

ICOMOS, the International Council on Monuments and Sites, is an international, non-governmental organization with over 9,500 members in 110 countries. ICOMOS works for the conservation and protection of cultural heritage places. It is the only global non-government organisation of this kind, which is dedicated to promoting the application of theory, methodology, and scientific techniques to the conservation of the architectural and archaeological heritage. Its work is based on the principles enshrined in the 1964 International Charter on the Conservation and Restoration of Monuments and Sites (the Venice Charter).

ICOMOS is a network of experts that benefits from the interdisciplinary exchange of its members, among which are architects, historians, conservator-restorers, archaeologists, art historians, geographers, anthropologists, engineers and town planners.

The members of ICOMOS contribute to improving the preservation of heritage, the standards and the techniques for each type of cultural heritage property: buildings, historic cities, cultural landscapes.

In addition, ICOMOS aims to:

- collect, evaluate and disseminate information on conservation principles, techniques and policies;
- cooperate with national and international authorities on the establishment of documentation centres specializing in conservation;
- work for the adoption and implementation of international conventions on the conservation and enhancement of architectural heritage;
- participate in the organization of training programmes for conservation specialists on a world-wide scale;
- put expertise of highly qualified professionals and specialists at the service of the international community.

ECCO, the European Confederation of Conservator-Restorers' Organisations, was established on 14 October 1991, as an international association dedicated to the development and promotion - at a practical, scientific and cultural level- of the Conservation-Restoration of cultural heritage. It has 21 member organisations in Europe and three associate members all composed of professional Conservator-Restorers.

E.C.C.O. promotes a high level of education and training, research and practice in the field of Conservation-Restoration, in accordance with the definition adopted by E.C.C.O.
E.C.C.O. aims to work toward legal recognition of professional standards in order to affirm and obtain recognition of the professional status of Conservator-Restorer at National and European level.
